NORDIC RAW

Raw material
Rough surfaces
Modest aesthetic

Rough materials and raw surfaces are a part of the Scandinavian design aesthetic, which we find ever-present and utterly important in our approach to interior and furniture design.

Unity and strong collaboration have never been more important. While our world in some ways seem immense, in other ways we have never been closer. In times of worry and when faced with unaccustomed circumstances, that challenge our lives and the way we think, we reflect on our beliefs and rediscover our deepest values which in new ways become significant.

Our core has always been rooted in quality materials and solid craftsmanship, and combining these with the Nordic, raw design aesthetic. In this collection we focus on creating design based on the rough Nordic expression.

Just as all our lives are shaped by the experiences we are given, so are our products layered with the life which nature has given them. We create unique designs entrenched in Danish design history, finding the beauty that lies beyond mere functionality and expression, and valuing the necessity of imperfection.

BIRGITTE RØMER

By the big glass windows in her creative work studio and office, Head of design at Muubs, Birgitte Rømer, passionately puts her heart and soul into creating design items, which have the ability to bring authenticity and beauty into our homes. She is deeply involved in the creation of new designs; shaping objects by hand and moulding the materials with her fingers.

Especially the Aion candleholder, a raw and sculptural item in casted iron, is one of the accessories, Birgitte Rømer is very fond of. She eagerly tells about the creation of the Aion candleholder:

"Aion is inspired by nature and the branches of trees. Nature has always been my biggest inspiration and a true source of genuine value and beauty. I moulded the Aion form in clay at my studio and then it kind of took a life on its own, becoming not just a unique design item but also an object which characterize the DNA and identity of Muubs in such a profound way."

Her deep passion for quality materials and the raw Scandinavian design aesthetic shines through in the way she carefully selects collaborators and creates design items; choosing simplicity and meeting real needs of people, both in terms of functional design but also with an aesthetical mindset. When asked what the vision behind every designed product is, Birgitte Rømer answers with conviction in her voice: "Creating products that are made to move, touch and inspire, and celebrating the beauty of imperfection in modern living is what drives us at Muubs every single day. I believe that being surrounded by natural, changing, unique objects help us connect with our world."

To Birgitte Rømer it is important to set the mind free and let her intuition and body lead the way: "I've always strived to let my hands lead the creative process and go wherever this may take me. To create great items, you need to forget about all the restriction, just for a second, and trust the creative process." She firmly states and continues: "Of course there is a lot of steps in the making of a design and for the most part they are limiting. But when you start with a clear mind and freedom in your approach to the process, I believe you get the best starting point. And I think the Aion candleholder is a great example of that."

Guided and driven by an instinctive love of the beauty and power of our roots, ancestors and Nordic nature, we firmly believe in preserving originality and creating timeless interior design objects with great functionality. Products that create contrasts, play with our imagination, age gracefully and add the missing piece of soul and roughness to our homes. We call it 'perfect imperfection'.

COLLABORATIONS

SAYS WHO

Fundamentally grounded in the Scandinavian design aesthetic, the Danish design studio Says Who creates furniture with a meticulous devotion to detail and refinement. Outlooking the shining water of the Bay of Aarhus, the two founders Nikolaj Duve and Kasper Meldgaard sketch and shape design with stylish simplicity and functionality as core qualities.

Collaborating with Muubs has given Says Who an opportunity to combine their Scandinavian minimalistic design with a raw and more industrial look, a challenge they found inspiring, and as it turned out also an ideal match: "Making this fusion between us and Muubs was incredible. We shared and believed in a vision of bringing this kind of design to the customers, and we succeeded!" Says Who took on the task of working on a chair, which could be used both in the living room and the kitchen: "We challenged ourselves with the goal of creating a chair for Muubs that would represent the brand, their material palette and their love for crafted objects. And much like Muubs, we wanted to create something that was authentic and soulful. A design that had an amazing story and a recognizable plot and ultimately a chair full of originality and timeless character."

Almost every designer considers the chair as the most iconic and difficult design to make, and this is also the case for Says Who: "The chair is always a great challenge. It is a complex item to work with because it has to look great from every angle and the comfort and proportions have to be just right. In many ways, the chair is an icon to pursue and kind of unattainable - and that makes it fun. So, it is especially gratifying to complete the Chamfer chairs in such a successful way."

The Chamfer chairs are a result of an exploration of materials, angles and lines: "The idea was that we didn't have to bend anything, just angle the lines. The design gave rise to the dynamic character of the chair. The angled seat and back achieves a great comfort through a simple angled cut in the centre. It gives the chair a distinct look as well. The light steel frame enhances the industrial raw feel of the chair and sets it apart in any interior. The Chamfer chairs offer a highly recognizable silhouette and a unique expression where details and overall proportions go hand in hand."

We find and celebrate the beauty that lies in imperfection and proudly present elegant, durable, unique and raw interior for your home.
